Civil Justice for Victims of Crime in New Jersey

This booklet was published with the generous support of

JOHN BLUME, ESQ.
BLUME, GOLDFADEN, BERKOWITZ, DONNELLY, FRIED & FORTE
Chatham, NJ

JEFFREY FRITZ, ESQ.
Philadelphia, PA

HAROLD GERR, ESQ.
Highland Park, NJ

JOHN A. KAYE, ESQ.
LOMURRO, DAVISON, EASTMAN & MUNOZ
Freehold, NJ

ROBERT McGUIRL, ESQ.
Park Ridge, NJ

For more information about civil justice for crime victims, or to order more copies of this booklet, please contact the National Crime Victim Bar Association.

The National Crime Victim Bar Association is an affiliate of:

©2008 National Center for Victims of Crime
Civil Justice for Victims of Crime in New Jersey

Table of Contents

I. Purpose of This Booklet ........................................... 2
II. Victims’ Financial Losses and Potential Sources of Compensation .... 2
III. Why File a Civil Lawsuit? ......................................... 4
IV. Comparing Civil and Criminal Justice ................................ 4
V. Parties in a Civil Lawsuit ........................................... 8
VI. Statutes of Limitations ............................................. 9
VII. Types of Civil Lawsuits ............................................ 10
VIII. Victim Privacy .................................................. 11
IX. Filing a Civil Lawsuit ............................................. 12
X. Discovery .......................................................... 12
XI. Trial ..................................................................... 13
XII. Damages ............................................................. 13
XIII. Judgment and Enforcement ....................................... 13
XIV. When a Perpetrator Sues a Victim ................................ 14
XV. About Lawyers .................................................... 14
XVI. Conclusion ......................................................... 17

The National Crime Victim Bar Association
2000 M Street, Suite 480
Washington, DC 20036
1-800-FYI-CALL
1-202-467-8753
victimbar@ncvc.org
www.victimbar.org

The National Crime Victim Bar Association is an affiliate of the National Center for Victims of Crime, a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit corporation.

DISCLAIMER
The information contained in this booklet is not provided for the purposes of rendering legal advice or authority. The National Center for Victims of Crime and the National Crime Victim Bar Association specifically disclaim any liability, loss, or risk, personal or otherwise, which is incurred as a consequence, directly or indirectly, of the use and application of any of the contents of this publication.

©2008 National Center for Victims of Crime
I. Purpose of This Booklet

Every crime victim has the right to file a civil lawsuit seeking financial compensation from the perpetrator or from other parties whose unreasonable conduct gave rise to conditions which allowed the crime to occur. The purpose of this handbook is to provide victims and service providers with a basic understanding of the civil justice system so that victims might consider this important option and know where to turn for help.

II. Victims’ Financial Losses and Potential Sources of Compensation

More than twenty-three million Americans are victimized by crime each year. The consequences of crime frequently extend far beyond the criminal act. All too often, victims are left with expenses for medical procedures, physical rehabilitation, counseling, lost wages, and property damage. It has been estimated that crime costs society $450 billion annually.

Restitution

Restitution is the money a judge orders the offender to pay to the victims to compensate for out-of-pocket expenses related to a crime. Restitution is part of the offender’s sentence and can be ordered in both adult and juvenile cases following a conviction or plea of guilty. The amount of restitution ordered by the judge depends on the victims’ expenses, which may include medical and dental bills, counseling, transportation, lost wages due to injury, and stolen or damaged property. A criminal Court cannot order restitution payments for physical pain, suffering, or emotional trauma. Victims who seek financial compensation for these types of losses must have an attorney pursue a civil lawsuit against the perpetrator or other responsible parties as described in this booklet.

New Jersey law provides that a court may require an offender to pay all restitution to the victim before paying other fines. However, a court order does not guarantee payment of restitution by the offender. Victims seeking restitution should obtain a restitution form from the county prosecutor or victim service provider.

State Crime Victim Compensation

Compensation may also be available to victims from the New Jersey Victims of Crime Compensation Agency. The Agency’s compensation fund is designed to reimburse victims for certain losses and expenses resulting from crime, such as funeral expenses, medical bills, counseling fees, lost wages, attorney’s fees, and other out-of-pocket costs. A compensation award may be reduced by the amount of money that a victim received from insurance or other sources. The maximum award is $25,000, with an additional $35,000 available to victims with catastrophic injuries or those requiring rehabilitative assistance. State law also limits how much money can be given for a particular type of loss. For example, the maximum reimbursement for funerals is $5,000, and the maximum award for lost wages is $600 per week. There are also restrictions on eligibility for victim compensation. For more information, contact the New Jersey Victims of Crime Compensation Agency at 1-800-242-0804 or visit their Web site at www.nj.gov/victims.

Civil Actions May Help Where Restitution and State Compensation Cannot

Restitution and compensation often do not cover a victim’s full economic losses, and neither source pays anything for hard to quantify damages such as pain and suffering. A civil lawsuit may provide more complete compensation to a victim. Victims do not have to choose among restitution, compensation, and filing a civil lawsuit. Victims may receive funds from all three sources, though there are checks and balances in each system to ensure that no victim is compensated for the same loss more than once. Victims are advised to pursue all three financial options at the same time to have the best chance of receiving just compensation from the appropriate source as soon as possible.
III. Why File a Civil Lawsuit

Some of the benefits of civil actions may include:

Control of the Case - Victims have greater control in a civil suit than in a criminal case because they are a party to the civil case, cannot be excluded from the courtroom, and have final approval of settlement proposals.

Compensation - Civil actions can provide compensation for victims for the monetary damages they suffered, such as medical expenses or lost income. Civil actions can also compensate victims for the emotional damage they have suffered.

Justice and Accountability - Civil suits can hold offenders directly accountable to victims. These suits give victims their “day in court,” regardless of whether there was a criminal conviction or any prosecution at all.

Crime Prevention - In addition to suing perpetrators, victims can often sue other responsible parties. Civil actions provide economic incentives for crime prevention. Businesses such as hotels, apartments, and shopping centers sometimes fail to enact proper security measures because they view such expenses as unnecessary. When businesses are held accountable for safety lapses, proper security becomes cheaper than the cost of defending lawsuits. Crime victims’ civil suits have resulted in increased security protection in public places, better oversight and supervision of daycare facilities, and countless other improvements.

IV. Comparing Civil and Criminal Justice

Both the civil and criminal justice systems have important roles in securing justice for victims of crime. These systems are not mutually exclusive, so victims do not have to choose one system over the other. Many victims choose to go through both systems. Because the criminal and civil justice systems were designed to address different needs, victims are best served when these systems work together.

A significant difference between the criminal and civil court systems is that in a civil case, the victim controls essential decisions shaping the case. It is the victim who decides whether to sue, accept a settlement offer, or go to trial.

The Criminal Justice System

The criminal justice process begins after a crime has been committed and reported to law enforcement. If an arrest has been made and charges have been filed, the offender may be prosecuted. In a criminal prosecution, the crime is considered “a crime against the state.” The victim’s role is primarily defined as a witness for the prosecution. Although the prosecuting attorney may be very helpful to the victim and the victim’s family, the prosecutor’s primary responsibility is to represent the interests of the state, not the victim.

The criminal justice process judges the guilt or innocence of accused offenders, and when offenders are found guilty, attempts to punish or rehabilitate them.

The Civil Justice System

The civil justice system does not attempt to determine the innocence or guilt of an offender. Offenders are also not imprisoned. Rather, civil courts attempt to determine whether an offender or a third party is liable for the injuries sustained as a result of the crime.

A civil court’s finding of liability usually means that the defendant must pay the victim, or the victim’s family, monetary damages. The civil justice system can provide victims with monetary resources necessary to rebuild their lives.

While the criminal justice system holds defendants accountable for their “crimes against the state,” the civil justice system holds defendants who are found liable directly accountable to their victims.

Burden of Proof

In the civil justice system, liability must be proven by a fair preponderance of the evidence, which simply means that one side’s evidence is more persuasive than the other’s. In other words, the plaintiff must prove there is a 51 percent or greater chance that the defendant committed all the elements of the particular wrong. This stan-
CRIMINAL CASES

In a CRIMINAL case

| ...the goal is to hold the defendant accountable to the State. | ...the goal is to hold the defendant accountable to the State. |
| ...the State prosecutes and controls the case. | ...the victim initiates and controls the case. |
| ...the victim is a witness. Although the victim may have rights to participate in the criminal justice process, the victim does not have the right to direct the prosecution of the case or to veto the prosecutor’s decisions. | ...the victim is a party, and as such, is entitled to all important information relating to the case, and can make decisions about the direction of the case, such as settlement of the claim. |
| ...the State must prove that the perpetrator is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. | ...the victim must prove that it is more likely than not that the perpetrator is liable. |
| ...the perpetrator is presumed innocent until proven guilty. | ...the civil system makes no such presumption. The victim and the perpetrator appear as equals. |

If a perpetrator is found guilty in a criminal court, the perpetrator is subject to punishment, such as probation or jail, and is held accountable to the state. The victim will not obtain money unless the court orders the defendant to pay restitution for the victim’s out-of-pocket expenses. The court cannot order restitution for non-economic damages.

If the perpetrator is found not guilty, the state cannot initiate a second prosecution.

CIVIL LAWSUITS

In a CIVIL lawsuit

| ...the victim is a party, and as such, is entitled to all important information relating to the case, and can make decisions about the direction of the case, such as settlement of the claim. | ...the goal is to hold the defendant accountable to the victim. |
| ...the victim initiates and controls the case. | ...the victim is a witness. Although the victim may have rights to participate in the criminal justice process, the victim does not have the right to direct the prosecution of the case or to veto the prosecutor’s decisions. |
| ...the victim must prove that it is more likely than not that the perpetrator is liable. | ...the civil system makes no such presumption. The victim and the perpetrator appear as equals. |
| ...the victim can sue the perpetrator in a civil court regardless of whether the perpetrator has been found guilty in a criminal prosecution. | ...if the perpetrator is found guilty in a criminal court, the perpetrator is subject to punishment, such as probation or jail, and is held accountable to the state. The victim will not obtain money unless the court orders the defendant to pay restitution for the victim’s out-of-pocket expenses. The court cannot order restitution for non-economic damages. |
| ...if the perpetrator is found not guilty, the state cannot initiate a second prosecution. | ...if the perpetrator is found liable in a civil court, the perpetrator owes an obligation to the victim, such as money to compensate the victim for expenses like medical and therapy expenses, psychological damage, damage to family relationships, and lost wages. A civil court can order the perpetrator to pay for non-economic damages, such as pain and suffering, and can also order punitive damages. |

A good example of this principle is the O.J. Simpson case. Simpson was prosecuted for the murder of his former wife, Nicole Brown, and Ronald Goldman. The jury in the criminal case found Simpson “not guilty” of the murders. Despite Simpson’s acquittal, the victims’ families filed and won a civil wrongful death lawsuit against Simpson. The jury in the civil case awarded the victims’ families $33.5 million in damages. While a criminal conviction may increase the chances of a perpetrator being held civilly liable, it is not a requirement for bringing a civil action.
V. Parties in a Civil Lawsuit

Plaintiffs
The main parties in a civil suit are called plaintiffs and defendants. Plaintiffs are the individuals who file the suit. They control the action, are entitled to all information relating to the case, and make decisions, such as settlement. The plaintiff in a civil suit can be the victim, survivors of the victim, or persons responsible for the victim.

Family Members
Family members who might bring a civil suit include the parents, spouse, children, or siblings of the victim.

Defendants
The defendants are the parties against whom a civil action is brought. The defendants in a civil suit can be the perpetrators, individuals who have assisted the perpetrators, or individuals or organizations whose negligence has in some way contributed to the commission of the crime (third parties).

Offenders
The offenders are the individuals who committed the original offense, whether or not they were found guilty by a criminal court.

Third Parties
In some civil cases, a “third-party” defendant may be held liable. Third-party defendants are not the persons who actually commit the crimes, but instead are those parties who may have contributed to or facilitated them. A few examples of possible third-party defendants in a victim’s case would include:

- landlords who do not provide adequate security measures, such as locks on doors and windows and adequate lighting;
- colleges that fail to provide adequate security for students or fail to notify students of campus assaults, leaving students vulnerable to victimization;
- shopping malls that do not employ security guards or take other necessary measures, despite a likelihood of criminal attacks on customers;
- people who allow children access to firearms or other dangerous instruments when the children, in turn, use the weapons to injure other people;
- child-care centers, schools, and churches that do not properly check the backgrounds of their employees, or simply transfer employees to other locations following allegations of abuse; or
- tavern owners or social hosts who continue to serve alcohol to inebriated persons who subsequently injure other people in drunk driving crashes.

VI. Statutes of Limitations

There are time limits for filing civil suits set by law. Any suit filed after the expiration of the statute of limitations is “time-barred” and cannot proceed. In New Jersey, a civil suit based on wrongful death arising out of murder, aggravated manslaughter, or manslaughter for which the defendant has been criminally convicted, found not guilty by reason of insanity, or found to be delinquent, has no statute of limitations and may be filed at any time. A lawsuit claiming personal injury or property damage must be filed within two years of the injury.

If the victim is a child under the age of eighteen at the time of the injury, then that child’s right to file a lawsuit is extended two years from the age of eighteen. For example, if the victim of a crime is fourteen years old, that victim’s right to file a lawsuit through a parent or guardian is immediate; however, if no lawsuit is filed, the child still has the right to initiate a lawsuit anytime before he or she turns twenty.

A civil action based on the sexual abuse of a child must be commenced within two years of the reasonable discovery of the harm suffered and of the discovery that the harm was the result of sexual abuse. Many survivors of childhood sexual abuse are aware of what happened to them but may not realize that the act constituted abuse or may not consider it harmful. Often victims are well into adulthood before the impact of abuse manifests in other conditions such as depression and addictions.
Victims who seek treatment for these conditions may find that they are results of the sexual abuse. In a civil lawsuit it is often a disputed issue as to when a victim reasonably discovered or should have discovered the connection between the abuse and the harm suffered. An attorney should always be consulted about questions regarding a statute of limitations.

VII. Types of Civil Lawsuits

There are numerous claims under which civil actions may be brought. They include wrongful death, assault and battery, intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress, and negligence. Some of these actions are described below.

In civil cases, the crime or wrongful act is referred to as a tort. For most criminal offenses, there is a corresponding tort for which a crime victim may bring a civil suit.

Some examples of torts include:

Assault - putting the victim in fear of immediate injury while the perpetrator has the ability to inflict such injury.

Battery - intentional physical contact with a person without that person's consent. Battery includes the crimes of sexual battery, rape, molestation, fondling, forcible sodomy, malicious wounding, and attempted murder.

Wrongful Death - a death caused by another person which occurs without justification or excuse, including murder, manslaughter, and vehicular homicide.

False Imprisonment - holding a victim against his or her will for any amount of time, no matter how brief. This act often occurs in rape and kidnapping situations.

Intentional or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress - causing a victim emotional distress or anxiety through extreme and offensive conduct. This act is frequently seen in stalking cases.

Fraud - an intentional misrepresentation of facts made to deceive the victim, resulting in damages. This act is often seen in white collar or economic crimes such as criminal fraud, telemarketing schemes, or racketeering.

Conversion - the theft or destruction of personal property or money. This act includes larceny, concealment, and embezzlement.

Negligence - the failure to use such care as a reasonably prudent person would use under similar circumstances, when such failure is the cause of the plaintiff's injury. Examples include negligent security and negligent hiring.

Common Defenses

There are several defenses that defendants of a civil lawsuit may use in an effort to avoid civil liability. These defenses include: self defense, comparative negligence, assumption of risk, and immunity.

Self Defense - perpetrators claim their actions were justified because they were defending themselves or someone else.

Comparative Negligence - the defendant claims that the victim's negligent conduct caused or contributed to the victim's injuries. In New Jersey, the amount of money a successful plaintiff collects will be reduced by the plaintiff's proportional share of the blame for the injury. If the plaintiff is more than 50 percent responsible for his own injuries, he can make no recovery.

Assumption of Risk - defendants claim they should not be held liable because the victims voluntarily and knowingly exposed themselves to the danger.

Immunity - Under certain circumstances, the law provides immunity from civil liability to government agencies, government employees, and other parties.

VIII. Victim Privacy

Attorneys may employ various methods to protect victims’ privacy. Victims’ names and other personal information can be kept out of public records by filing suits under pseudonyms, such as Jane or John Doe. Victims can also use confidentiality agreements with the offender or third-party defendant, file cases “under seal” (closed to the public), and videotape depositions. Each of these tech-
Depositions
A deposition is a proceeding in which a party’s attorney has the opportunity to question opposing parties and potential witnesses under oath. Deposition testimony is transcribed. The transcripts may be used at trial for various reasons, including if the witnesses are no longer available or if the witnesses offer trial testimony which conflicts with the deposition.

After documents have been produced and depositions have been completed, each side should know much more about the other side’s case. At this point, the parties sometimes engage in negotiations which lead to settlement of the case.

XI. Trial
If a settlement is not reached, the case proceeds to trial. A plaintiff wins at trial if the plaintiff has met its burden of proof and the defendant has not successfully asserted a defense to the claim. If the plaintiff wins, the judge or jury awards damages and the matter is over unless the defendant appeals. A defendant wins at trial if the plaintiff has not met the burden of proof or the defendant has successfully asserted a defense. If the defendant wins, the case is finished unless the plaintiff appeals.

XII. Damages
Judges and juries have the power to decide how much money to award as damages if the plaintiff wins. There are two main types of damages, compensatory and punitive. The goal of compensatory damages is to “pay back” the injured party. The primary purpose of punitive damages is to punish and deter criminals or third parties.

XIII. Judgment and Enforcement
A victim contemplating a civil lawsuit should understand that obtaining a civil judgment is only half the battle. In many cases, it may be difficult to collect the money awarded by the court. Some defendants do not or cannot pay judgments.
they should feel as comfortable as possible in fully disclosing all details and information to their attorneys. Attorneys should be able to effectively explain all aspects of legal proceedings to victims, and they should be responsive to victims' needs and requests.

Victims should fully understand all the details of any retainer agreement (contract to hire the attorney) prior to signing it. If victims have questions, they should feel comfortable discussing them with their attorneys. If questions persist, local bar association personnel may be able to explain laws, regulations, and common practices pertaining to contracts with attorneys.

Victims should be clear about what they wish their attorneys to do, and attorneys should be clear about what services they are providing. Understanding each other's expectations—as well as avoiding unrealistic expectations—can minimize the possibility of disappointment and frustration.

Victims should feel free to consult with several lawyers before selecting one. Lawyers are professionals, and it is good consumer practice to obtain a second opinion in selecting professional legal counsel.

Victims should cooperate, as fully as possible, with their attorneys. Such cooperation is necessary for successful representation of their interests. By the same token, victims have the right to expect their attorneys to be understanding, respectful, and responsive to their needs. Attorneys have the right to expect their clients to be honest and willing to participate in building their own cases.

XV. About Lawyers

Finding a Lawyer
The National Center for Victims of Crime established the National Crime Victim Bar Association (NCVBA) to facilitate civil suits by crime victims. The NCVBA offers victims free referrals to attorneys for consultation.

Victims seeking more information or attorney referrals should call the NCVBA at

1-800-FYI-CALL / 1-800-394-2255.

Selection Considerations
More attorneys than ever are representing crime victims in civil lawsuits, though relatively few specifically list themselves as “crime victim” attorneys. Typically, these attorneys can be found handling premises liability, personal injury, wrongful death, or professional malpractice claims on behalf of plaintiffs. Finding qualified attorneys to represent victims in civil lawsuits often requires diligence.

A productive attorney-client relationship is based upon the ability of both sides to communicate fully and effectively with each other. Although relating sensitive details can be difficult for crime victims, they should feel as comfortable as possible in fully disclosing all details and information to their attorneys. Attorneys should be able to effectively explain all aspects of legal proceedings to victims, and they should be responsive to victims' needs and requests.

Victims should fully understand all the details of any retainer agreement (contract to hire the attorney) prior to signing it. If victims have questions, they should feel comfortable discussing them with their attorneys. If questions persist, local bar association personnel may be able to explain laws, regulations, and common practices pertaining to contracts with attorneys.

Victims should be clear about what they wish their attorneys to do, and attorneys should be clear about what services they are providing. Understanding each other's expectations—as well as avoiding unrealistic expectations—can minimize the possibility of disappointment and frustration.

Victims should feel free to consult with several lawyers before selecting one. Lawyers are professionals, and it is good consumer practice to obtain a second opinion in selecting professional legal counsel.

Victims should cooperate, as fully as possible, with their attorneys. Such cooperation is necessary for successful representation of their interests. By the same token, victims have the right to expect their attorneys to be understanding, respectful, and responsive to their needs. Attorneys have the right to expect their clients to be honest and willing to participate in building their own cases.

Information Your Attorney May Need
When crime victims consult with an attorney, they should be prepared to answer detailed questions about the case that will allow the attorney to conduct a proper evaluation. Attorneys might request information such as the following:

About the Criminal Event:
- Date and time of criminal occurrence
- Location of events, addresses, and description of premises
I. Source of funds to cover damages or losses such as insurance (policy number), crime victims’ compensation, Medicare, and restitution

Fees and Retainers

Usually, the types of civil cases brought by victims of crime are billed by attorneys on a contingency fee basis. This means the attorney is only paid if the victim is awarded a monetary settlement or judgment. Attorneys will be paid a predetermined percentage of the total award.

There are also costs, such as filing fees, deposition fees, and service of process fees the victim might be responsible for paying before a suit is filed or during the course of the suit. Some attorneys require that plaintiffs pay a retainer fee. A retainer is money paid to an attorney but kept in a special account from which the above-mentioned costs can be paid. Money not used in the retainer may be returned to the client at the conclusion of the suit.

XVI. Conclusion

The civil justice system offers victims of crime another opportunity to secure what they seek most—justice. Regardless of whether there was a successful criminal prosecution or any prosecution at all, victims can bring their claims before the court and ask to have the responsible parties held accountable. While money awarded in civil lawsuits can never fully compensate victims for the trauma of their victimizations or the loss of loved ones, it can provide valuable resources for crime victims to help rebuild their lives.